Brian Schneider is recognized as a top lawyer for trade associations and multiple listing services, combining his experience as a management consultant and antitrust advisor to craft legal strategies aligned with clients' business objectives. He partners with clients to navigate corporate strategy, resolve disputes, negotiate key contracts, and implement compliance solutions.

As outside general counsel for trade associations and MLSs, Brian manages day-to-day and emergent legal challenges-from litigation and board governance to antitrust compliance and leadership transitions. Clients rely on his strategic advice to anticipate risks and seize opportunities.

Brian serves as outside general counsel to trade associations, foundations, multiple listing services (MLSs), and technology firms. He works alongside clients' leadership, boards, and staff to provide strategic advice on governance, antitrust, contracts, intellectual property, litigation, and operational matters. Leveraging ArentFox Schiff's full-service platform, Brian delivers custom legal solutions for clients in industries including real estate, auto parts, higher education, finance, food and beverage, health care, retail, and SaaS.

Clients and their in-house counsel trust Brian to manage litigation and other disputes in the court room and at the negotiating table, with an emphasis on balancing dispute resolution with business objectives. Brian has extensive experience coordinating clients' strategies in response to litigation, subpoenas, and investigations stemming from antitrust allegations, contracts, and nonprofit laws. Brian litigates antitrust, fiduciary breach, and contract actions.

He has navigated litigation involving claims by antitrust plaintiffs and association members, high-stakes contract disputes, complex federal and state regulatory schemes, reimbursement from commercial payers, class actions, and international arbitrations.
