Zak D. Welsh is a partner in the San Francisco office of ArentFox Schiff LLP and a leading member of the firm's nationally ranked Sports Industry Group. Zak advises clients across the sports industry on a broad range of complex transactional matters. Zak has significant experience in naming rights and sponsorship agreements (including jersey patch agreements) — both on the team/venue side and the sponsor side — and has been centrally involved in many of the industry's largest deals, from SoFi Stadium to emerging next-generation venues such as Nu Stadium.

Zak's work spans a broad range of sports properties and leagues, including NFL, NBA, MLB, NHL, MLS, NWSL, NCAA, and multi-tenant and mixed-use venues. He represents professional sports franchises, leagues, ownership groups, venue developers and operators, corporate sponsors, universities, and media companies across the full lifecycle of sports assets, and is frequently entrusted with lead responsibility on high-profile and market-defining sports transactions.

In addition to naming rights and sponsorship transactions, Zak advises on sports M&A transactions, team and franchise investments, media and content arrangements, and a variety of other commercial agreements. His experience includes a leading role in the high-profile sale by the Buss family of a majority ownership stake in the Los Angeles Lakers to Mark Walter.

Zak also has particular experience in advising on new venue development and getting involved early to structure and execute cohesive foundational commercial and operational agreements. This experience includes designing and negotiating naming rights and sponsorship programs, suite and club seat license agreements, season ticket and ticketing agreements, team license agreements, food and beverage agreements, management agreements, agency agreements, and sponsorship sales agreements. He has led these efforts across a wide range of venue types, from large-scale developments such as SoFi Stadium and Hollywood Park, Snapdragon Stadium, and Etihad Park, to smaller and emerging venues such as CarMax Park, as well as standalone sports properties such as LIV Golf and Pioneer Baseball League clubs, including the Oakland Ballers. His work frequently sits at the intersection of sports, entertainment, hospitality, and real estate, including mixed-use developments anchored by major sports venues.

Zak also advises clients in the broader entertainment venue, hospitality, and real estate industries. His experience includes traditional real estate transactional matters with a particular focus on entertainment and hospitality assets, including acquisitions and dispositions, leasing and sublicensing, licensing arrangements, financing transactions, joint venture agreements and arrangements, promotional agreements, ground leases, and development agreements.

Zak has been consistently recognized in the sports and real estate industries by leading publications such as Legal 500, Best Lawyers, and Super Lawyers.
